The Challenge

Achieving operational efficiency today demands the use of a flexible enterprise management process embracing a single language and a single view of how to develop solutions.

Sustained delivery of quality products and services from your business and IT teams, delivered on time and on budget, requires more than heroic individuals. It also requires cohesive teamwork and a common understanding of development tasks. This becomes challenging as these tasks change in response to your evolving business goals and priorities.

Adding to the challenge is the fact that we are depending more and more on a networked model rather than a hierarchical model in response to the new Internet economy. Today, the implementation of a single predictable, repeatable process is crucial to your success.

The Fairhaven Solution

Javelin is Fairhaven's guiding development process to govern our own internal development efforts as well as our solution offerings. Javelin allows us to replace isolated and ad-hoc development processes with a single, shared view of the overall process, incorporating lessons learned and best practices from across the industry. The use of this core process allows us and our clients to outpace and outmaneuver the competition.
